Identity Finder Crack X64

The latest data breach on LinkedIn was released in the end of February 2018, that exposed personal information of more than 36 million users of the professional social network. The exposure included email addresses, passwords, and more. The company didn't reveal how it could be so easily accessed by an attacker, but the hackers exploited a vulnerability in LinkedIn's code. LinkedIn did not immediately disclose the nature of the attack, but the company did post a message on its website stating that it was investigating the attack. "LinkedIn can confirm that our investigation indicates that the compromise was limited to our Talent Solutions API. We have fixed this issue and are working to further enhance our security measures." The company says that there was no indication of unauthorized access or misuse of user information, but it has increased its security measures. The threat comes as another professional network, Formspring, disclosed earlier this year, that also exposed personal data of almost 80,000 users. LinkedIn uses two-step verification as its safety measure, but experts argue that it could be easily cracked. LinkedIn joins the list of high-profile data breaches in the last months, including those belonging to Target, Neiman Marcus, Home Depot, Sony, JCPenney, and Gap, where millions of people were affected.
